More and more homes are going green. If you'd like your place to be one of them, stop by this shop that exclusively sells green products for home décor as well as baby and pet products. It also offers home-improvement and remodeling services. Bamboo flooring and cabinets, anyone? This is a neat place to buy eco-friendly towels, bedding, soy candles, nontoxic baby bottles, toys for Fido, and stationery made from elephant dung. Other unique items include picture frames and can openers made from recycled bicycle parts. In case you're wondering if going green will cost you some major "green," owner Mylene D'Arelli reassures me that's not the case. She says her stuff costs the same as any good product at a department store. If you're still looking to save some money, call a couple of friends and schedule a Green Party at the store, where guests receive 15 percent off their purchases.
